

Fiber Optic Splice Test 1

Overview

This guide walks you through 7 proven, step-by-step methods to confidently use an OTDR to test fiber optic splices, read and interpret results, and make smart decisions about when to re-splice and when to sign off. Show Image Alt text: technician using OTDR to test fiber optic. ic system. Fiber optic testing of a newly installed system not only verifies that the system meets its design requirements, but also creates a performance baseline for all future testing and troubleshooting of t at system. Corning recommends that all fiber optic systems be tested to a minimum set. The Optical Time Domain Reflectometer (OTDR) will be used to test splice loss and to conduct span analysis. An Optical Power Meter and Laser Light Source will be used to measure power loss on each completed ring or distribution span to verify continuity between fibers (no fibers incorrectly spliced. Fiber Optic Testing Testing is used to evaluate the performance of fiber optic components, cable plants and systems. As the components like fiber, connectors, splices, LED or laser sources, detectors and receivers are being developed, testing confirms their performance specifications and helps. Fiber Stripping: Selecting Precise Tools and Techniques Selecting the appropriate stripper will depend on the fiber coating diameter. This will typically be 250 $\mu$ m for bare fibers and 900 $\mu$ m for coated fibers. Reputable companies like Jonard, Fujikura, and INNO provide multi-hole strippers calibrated. If you work with fiber optic networks, knowing how to use an OTDR to test fiber optic splices is one of the most powerful skills you can have.
